LehrPuls

FOR INSTRUCTORS

See within twenty seconds whether it landed — and know by the end of the semester what to change.

LehrPuls puts your question to the whole room. Participants answer on their own smartphones, the result grows live on the projector, and you decide whether to move on or take another run at it. Everything runs on your laptop: no account, no cloud, no subscription.

Your laptop is the server

Show the QR code, scan, answer. No download, no sign-up — works without internet in the room.

You learn about your teaching

The analytics show which explanation does not hold and which question is too easy or unclear — semester after semester.

Questions that stay

Set up topics, questions and playlists once, reuse them every semester, pass them on to colleagues.

question types: multiple choice to formula, cloze, sketch	from opening the question to the picture on the wall	participants per session, anonymous or by name	accounts, apps and cloud services for students

In the lecture hall

- Overlay on PowerPoint, Keynote or PDF — your slides stay, the question sits on top
- Peer instruction as a two-round flow: first alone, then after discussion
- Remote control on your own smartphone; question wall; send files to everyone
- Groups, anonymous too; station rotation; ad-hoc questions in between

Afterwards

- Analytics per question: distribution, difficulty, discrimination, response times
- Longitudinal: the same question across several semesters
- Export to Excel, report as PDF, API for Power BI and R
- Trial version without time limit: everything usable, limit six participants per session

From my own use: In a course with 30 to 36 students, the analytics after five sessions showed that almost half of the questions were too easy — the first feedback was about question quality, not about the students.
